Summer 2010 Edition

This guide was written by Erica Surprenant, Special Projects Director, edited by Molly Totman, J.D. and Leah Pinney, and designed by Kim Wilks.

We are grateful to the many people who invested their time and effort in researching resources for this guide. We wish to extend our deepest appreciation to the following individuals for their assistance and feedback: Athan Bernal, Alison Brock, Tram Dinh, Daniele Gillund, Tiffany LaCour, Dyana Limon-Mercado, Tiffany Nguyen, Jorge Antonio Renaud, Joy Rocha, and Dee Wilson. We would also like to thank the members of the House Committee on Corrections for their support.

DISCLAIMER

The resources and information contained in this guide are primarily intended for people re-entering society following a period of incarceration. The information is not inclusive and should be viewed as a starting point for engaging with community groups. Please also note that inclusion in this guide does not imply our endorsement of an organization or of particular religions (in the case of ministry-based programs).

The resources contained in this guide were current as of the start of 2010. While we have tried our best to only list groups, organizations, and businesses that are current and valid, we cannot guarantee that all of the resources included here will be current by the time you read it. Due to the nature of community-aid organizations and the funding streams available to keep them open, some of the resources within this guide may be out of date by the time you reference it.

As a precaution, please contact each organization directly before relying on its services or assistance. You should also check for the most recent edition of this guide and updates on our website, www.criminaljusticecoalition.org/tools_for_re_entry/reentryguide.

If you feel we have missed an important resource, or if you have additional resources or updates you would like to add to future editions of this guide, please fill out the feedback form at the end of this guide and mail it back to us. You may also submit feedback through our website at www.criminaljusticecoalition.org/tools_for_re_entry/reentryguide.

HOW TO USE THIS GUIDE

This guide is not intended to be the only information that people will need or use once they are released from prison or jail. In fact, it should be used as a starting point to begin a successful re-entry experience back into the community. Each chapter covers a general subject area associated with re-entry. Please use the resources at the end of each chapter to continue researching specific topics.

LETTER FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Dear Reader,

As the Executive Director of the Texas Criminal Justice Coalition (TCJC), I am thrilled to present the first edition of our statewide re-entry guide, which contains important and timely resource information for individuals returning to their communities after a period of incarceration.

Annually, over 70,000 people leave Texas prisons, while thousands more cycle in and out of local Texas jails. Among other things, undiagnosed mental health disorders, drug and alcohol dependence, and low education levels act as barriers to the successful re-entry of these people into society. Likewise, the lack of housing availability, an inability to purchase food, and limited employment opportunities can damage efforts to participate in society in a fulfilling and productive way.

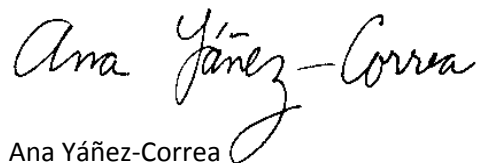

Our goal with this guide is three-fold. Primarily, we want to help those of you who are re-entering individuals seeking to live successfully in your communities. You can use this information to find community groups and agencies that will assist you in improving your lives and those of your families. Please know that we are here for you during these efforts.

This guide is also a tool for organization and agency leadership, as well as their supervisory personnel and local service providers. You can use the resources within these pages to provide particularized information to your clients and other staff members. Likewise, advocates can pass along this information to community members seeking assistance with re-entry issues.

Finally, policy-makers can use this guide to meet requests for information from their constituents, to the benefit of both re-entering individuals and their communities.

Again, we hope the information and resources contained in this guide will not only be readily available and useful to those that need them, but will promote the successful re-entry of previously incarcerated men and women. Doing so will benefit public safety, family cohesion, local economies, and public health, and it will improve the lives of all Texans.

Respectfully,

Ana Yáñez-Correa
Executive Director, Texas Criminal Justice Coalition

PART ONE: GETTING STARTED

The information in the following two chapters is meant to assist individuals who are either preparing to leave incarceration, have recently re-entered their communities, or would like to learn more about key re-entry related policies from Texas' 2009 state legislative session.

The Prison Experience and Preparing for Your Release

By Jorge Antonio Renaud*

WHY DO PEOPLE GO TO PRISON? THERE IS NO EASY ANSWER TO THAT QUESTION. THE SHEER number of factors that pull people into the criminal justice system is almost endless. Poverty, need, greed, drugs, alcohol, opportunity, despair, peer pressure: all may contribute to an individual's decision to commit a crime. Add the inequities built into the system itself – prosecutors focused on conviction rates; inadequate representation for poor defendants; judges pushing for plea bargains to move dockets along – and the question of whether or not the people who are in prison are in fact guilty and truly deserve their punishment becomes almost unanswerable. Many of them find that they were just pulled along, victimized by their hasty decisions and youthful mistakes.

Why do people who have been in prison return to prison? That is an entirely different question. Some people may not have housing, jobs, money, family, or transportation. They may have to register as sex offenders and be barred from obtaining licenses to practice their life-long professions. Previously incarcerated individuals speak of the X on their back almost as a target for society, and many people released into the streets adopt a self-defeating attitude: No matter what, I'll eventually go back because I'm an X.

As an X myself, one now going to grad school at the University of Texas and involved with various groups working to ease re-entry barriers, I think that a person in prison facing release has two huge advantages over a person facing prison for the first time: the experience of prison itself, and time to look at one's life and make a commitment to change.

Since you've been in prison, you've gotten off drugs. Maybe you've gone to school. You've had a chance to repair family relationships that your behavior ruptured. At least, you've done those things if you've awakened to the reality of your situation, because if you haven't, if you spent your time continuing the behavior that brought you to prison and have not examined and taken advantage of the opportunity to take a different path, then no matter what programs and services are made available to you, chances are you'll be back.

I'm here to say it doesn't have to be that way. You can leave prison a better person than you were before; more educated, wiser, calmer, and with people willing to stand by you when things get rough, as they will. With their assistance, but most importantly, with your newly formed positive attitude and willingness to wait and work for what you truly need, you'll be fine. But you can't wait until you hit the streets to change how you think and act. That must begin while you're still in prison.

Reform Your Habits Before Release

THE TIME TO BEGIN YOUR TRANSFORMATION IS NOT THE DAY YOU HIT THE STREETS, BUT THE day the cell doors first enclose you. At that point, you have to accept that you have little control over your daily life, and you must decide to adopt actions centered on daily growth and change or settle for an existence built around suspicion, bitterness, and anger. Many incarcerated individuals waste their time, and much of their sentences, getting angry over trivial matters: how a guard talked to them; the loud nature of the dayrooms; the commissary truck being late; no ice in the chow halls. If you whine and obsess over items out of your control in prison, you will do the same once on the streets. However, the consequences of this type of behavior in prison don't have the same type of impact as do the consequences on the streets.

If you decide to not go to your prison job one day, or if a guard in prison talks to you in a belittling way and your normal reaction is to curse and threaten in return, you'll receive disciplinary cases and lose class as a consequence. You may be denied contact visits and be placed on commissary and recreation restriction. However, you'll still have a bed, food, and clothes provided to you. You can still go to the infirmary, and within six months or a year your privileges will be restored. Your life will continue on relatively unaffected. On the streets, if you decide to not go to work one day, or if you curse and threaten someone, the consequences can include getting fired from a job, losing your income and not having money to buy food or pay rent. They can include someone calling the police on you, getting re-arrested and returning to that place you swore you'd never see again, just because you hadn't truly accepted the truth that it sure is easier to keep your mouth shut and ignore people than it is to scream back at them.

Learn how to deal with people who have power over you while you are in prison, because people will still have power over you once you're free. If a guard talks to you in an ugly fashion, walk away. Tell yourself that the guard is human; that he or she has a sick child at home, a dying mother, bills to pay, and that his or her attitude is not meant to diminish you personally. His or her attitude and words do not define you. Your actions define you, and if you react in a calm, dignified manner to prison abuse, you are better able to deal with obnoxious free-world employers, suspicious parole officers, and cynical policemen.

Practical Plans and Goals

DON'T WAIT UNTIL YOU GET TO THE STREETS TO LOOK FOR A JOB, A PLACE TO STAY, OR anything else of importance. While in prison you can begin to write potential employers, local colleges, and service providers in the area you're going to live. Ask your unit librarian or one of the CHANGES or RIO counselors to provide you with addresses. When you write, ask potential employers about the procedure for applying for work; whether or not all applications must be online, or if they must be completed and then accepted in person. Ask college registrars what you'll need in order to enroll. Find out if your college credits are going to be accepted, and when the financial aid offices are open. Ask the service providers in the county you are paroling to what paperwork you will need to apply for food stamps or other forms of assistance. Some organizations may require that you be out before they even begin to provide information, but that's OK. At least you'll have a phone number and address, some place to begin. You won't be lost when you're released.

You should make a list of reachable goals for you to accomplish once you have been released. This should include goals for the first week, the first month, the first three months, etc. You should have a bus pass by the first week, a job by the first month, maybe be enrolled in college or technical school by six months. These are reachable, practical goals. Don't make your goals too hard to reach, such as saying you'll buy a house in a year. Focus on the real stuff – getting a job, joining a church, becoming reacquainted with your daughter, getting back into school. Actually thinking of these goals, and then writing them down, makes them more real than just daydreaming of what you'll do.

Making a list of goals also makes you focus on what you need, and on what you can really do. It will make you concentrate on the nuts and bolts of actually achieving what you need to achieve. It would also be helpful if you write down a schedule of your first few weeks: who you'll go see, how you'll get there, the things you'll need to survive, and how you plan on getting them. Who will you need to contact? Do you need to find an AA/NA group and go to meetings? Will you need to go to the Veterans' Administration and apply for medical benefits? To the county courthouse to get a birth certificate? To the DPS to take your driving test? To the Texas Workforce Commission? Do the local buses run by all of those places? Can you find that out fairly quickly? Write down when you can go and how you'll get there. Have a plan. Control what you can control.

Connecting With Family

MANY PEOPLE IN INCARCERATION HAVE HAD FAMILY problems and have poor relationships with their parents, spouses, or children. Those problems do not just disappear; they must be faced and dealt with. You should do all you can to begin a healing process while in prison. Write to your family, to anyone you've hurt or disappointed or fought with. Make your amends. Don't wait for them to write back, especially if they're your children. Write them constantly. You'll be surprised how far consistent communication goes toward getting family members to thaw out.

Be honest with your family. If you ask them for help, be upfront about what you will need and what you expect to give back. If all you can return to them in exchange for a bed and food is some yard work or house upkeep, say that. Don't promise $400 a month when you don't have a job waiting and any job you may have won't pay but $800 a month. Your family will know your promises are unrealistic and wonder about the rest of your plans. Don't expect them to have a car ready for you or be able to buy you a bunch of new clothes. Be appreciative of anything they offer, and tell them so.

Don't expect to step right back as head of the household. Someone else in your family may have assumed that role by virtue of their being dependable, hard working, and fair. Be honest with yourself; if those words defined you, you'd never have gone to prison. Don't make plans to push anyone aside, to be the father or mother or son you weren't before you went in and for the length of your prison term. You will have to adjust, to demonstrate you've changed and can be depended on before your family truly accepts you back.

After You're Out

SO NOW YOU'RE OUT. YOU HAVE YOUR LIST OF GOALS, ADDRESSES AND PHONE NUMBERS of potential employers, and an appointment with the VA for a real medical checkup, not the TDCJ kind. Before you do anything, take time to relax. After I'd been out just over a year, I saw a friend, a former gang member who had been released on intensive supervision, and he moaned to me about how he was "more miserable" than he'd ever been. This man could only think about the fact that he had to go straight to work from his house, attached to a GPS monitor, and that his living area was restricted to his house and yard. He couldn't go to parties or out shopping; couldn't drive to the beach or go swimming; couldn't attend his daughter's school plays or PTA meetings. So he was miserable.

My friend only saw what he could not do, what he did not have. I asked him if he was truly more miserable being out and driving to work in his own car with the windows open, listening to the radio, drinking a soft drink and eating French fries, than he'd been sitting in administrative segregation for 23 hours a day for years. Although he had to stay in his house and yard, his bedroom included a bed where he could sleep with and hold his wife. His backyard included a barbecue pit, where his family gathered around when they came to visit. His house included a small family room, where he could help his daughter with her homework, watch movies with his family, and close the door to his own bathroom. But he was still focusing on what he didn't have, on what he couldn't do, instead of being grateful for what he had.

This attitude is typical. It's not just sad and a bit silly; it can be a real obstacle. Those who are incarcerated build up unrealistic expectations of what life on the streets will be like, creating fantasies and images of what we'll do and how we'll do it. We forget that our lives will still be under a lot of control. But we also forget that, no matter how harsh the restrictions placed upon us, they are not and will never be as bad as the restrictions that living behind iron for 24 hours a day place upon us. You should constantly tell yourself that and enjoy yourself when you're out, and congratulate yourself for having survived with your dignity and humor intact.

As soon as possible after your release, go to a movie with a friend. Get a bike and ride on a trail. Walk through a mall. Go swimming. Take your kids to a park. Enjoy your freedom. And if you don't have kids or a bike or the money for a movie, then sit outside under the stars and listen to the free world, because you're a part of it now, and you haven't been for years. Keep telling yourself that.

Asking For and Accepting Help

ONE OF THE FIRST THINGS YOU'LL HAVE TO LEARN IS HOW TO ADMIT THAT YOU NEED HELP because you don't know something, can't do something, or just need something that you maybe can't get on your own. This can range from small things, such as asking your friend to help you program your phone, to requesting government aid for housing and food. Much depends on how long you've been in. I spent 26 years behind bars, 16 straight the last time, and the whole cell phone concept was new to me when I was released in 2008. I felt ignorant when I first bought one, and I had no idea how to program my contacts, how to save photos, or how to set up my speed dial. I fumbled around with it, feeling stupid, until I finally just went into the phone kiosk at the mall and asked. The people there were cool and I walked out feeling relieved.

This may sound trivial, but feeling stupid is a feeling that previously incarcerated individuals can live without. We've had people telling us that for so long we may believe it a little. Technology has passed many of us by. It can make us feel bewildered and even make us long a little for the simplicity, and the safety, of prison. Don't be humbled or frightened by the changes in life, but embrace them and the truth that people will help you understand those changes. The same thing applies about asking for assistance from the government, or from local aid agencies. This assistance may come in the form of food stamps, temporary IDs, or some other needed item. Some agencies offer bus passes, or at least discounted bus passes. Many local agencies offer clothing, especially work clothing, to those who have just been released. Some will help you buy a suit for job interviews, or at least offer to loan you a suit for a special interview.

Many Texas cities offer free food at food banks, most of which are run by government agencies. Some will provide canned goods; others will give you produce and fruit. They don't care if you're previously incarcerated. Many will provide you with emergency foodstuffs if you show up with discharge or parole papers showing that you've been out a few days or a week or so. Others may want you to fill out paperwork first. Many religious organizations, usually local churches, offer free meals to needy people, if you are in need of a hot meal.

It may take you a bit of searching to find a food bank that will provide you with the basics – canned goods, vegetables and fruit, different types of meat. But the money you'll save by getting a couple of weeks worth of free food means you don't have to spend those few precious dollars on food, and instead you can buy some decent shoes or get a good haircut for that all-important first interview.

Depending on where you're going to live, you'll have different county organizations offering different levels of help. But no matter where you live, you'll find an office of the Texas Workforce Commission nearby. Big cities have quite a few offices; smaller towns have just one, open two or three days a week. The people there are incredibly helpful. They will help you register for government-provided services, alert you to job leads, keep you advised about upcoming job fairs, and generally do all they can to help you find a job or get into some sort of technical or vocational school. They will also buy you tools to make you more attractive to employers. The office in Llano bought me close to $1,000 worth of construction tools when I first was released, and as a result my employer gave me a dollar an hour raise because he didn't have to provide those tools.

The Texas Workforce Commission has also received quite a bit of stimulus-package funds, and they have used much of that money to offer courses in non-traditional areas. In Austin, they were recently offering truck-driving classes, solar-panel technician courses, computer engineering, and various others. Take advantage of all they have to offer, to either find a job, upgrade to a new one, or just hunt for educational opportunities. Texas Workforce offices have computers you can use, free workshops on résumé writing and interviewing for jobs, and they will generally offer you all you need to become employed, if you are willing to listen and do what they say.

Speaking of computers – it may be that you won't have one when you are first released. In today's world, nothing beats being able to go online and search for jobs at one of the hundreds of sites that offer job leads. Plus, most employers now want you to submit your application online. But what if you don't have a computer and the Texas Workforce Commission office is pretty far away or closed on the weekends and you want to search for a job? Then you need to find a library.

The first week that you're released, go to a public library and get a library card. Every library in Texas has a few computers available to the public; some have dozens. Get there early, go online, set up an email account, and do what you have to do. The librarians can help you. You can also check out DVDs and books, read the latest magazines and newspapers, and generally get plugged back into the world, free of charge. Why buy magazines, books, or rent movies when the library will lend them to you and not charge you a penny?

What about clothes? You may not want to hear this, but shopping at Goodwill or at the Salvation Army isn't a bad idea. I have been amazed by the quality of clothes at Goodwill. People drop them off on the weekends, and the best items can be found on Tuesdays, after they've been picked through. You can get good shirts for three dollars, jeans for five dollars, used sneakers for about 10 bucks, and ties and belts and coats, all for less than 20 dollars. You can spend 50 dollars and get outfitted well enough to apply and interview for, then work at, either offices or construction sites.

Housing

IF YOU'RE ONE OF THE LUCKY PEOPLE WHO IS PAROLING OR DISCHARGING BACK TO FAMILY, be grateful. You need to know that, by law, many people who have been incarcerated, especially those convicted of various drug offenses, can't live in public housing. This means that if your family is living in Section 8 housing or some similar, government-funded housing, you may not be allowed to live with them. However, each entity, be it a housing authority or a private provider of Section 8 housing, is allowed to make a determination on a case-by-case basis. Your family needs to contact whatever agency is in charge of their housing to check if they will allow you to live with them when you are paroled.

If your family is living in a private apartment, the same may apply, and their lease could restrict them from allowing felons to live there. Again, have them check, because while it could be easy to just move in and not say anything, they could very well be asked to leave and could lose their deposit if their lease is restricted and it is found out a felon is living with them. This could have severe repercussions for you, not to mention on your relations with your family. Of course, if you're paroling to a private home, you don't have anything to worry about. But it could be that you will soon be looking for a place to live on your own, and if that is the case, you'll need to do some research to find an apartment complex that will interview you and allow you to sign a lease. If you lie and they find out, you'll be on the street. The best thing to do is call around, find a complex that doesn't have restrictions against ex-felons, or at least is willing to discuss your situation.

If you're just getting out and don't have a place to stay at all, then you need to contact your nearest Salvation Army. They will have temporary shelter, and in the meantime you can look for local halfway houses. There are organizations that will direct you to housing that is often provided by businesses sympathetic to people leaving incarceration. In Austin, there is a man who rents trailer houses to previously incarcerated people for $400 a month, all bills paid. He also works with them to help find employment, and there is an AA/NA group in the trailer complex itself comprised of similar folks, all doing what they can to stay clean and free.

Working With Your Community Supervision Officer

ONE OF THE MAIN REASONS THAT PREVIOUSLY INCARCERATED INDIVIDUALS RETURN TO prison is that they end up on the wrong foot with their parole officer; then when they need a break, the parole officer isn't willing to extend it. I don't have to tell you that the men and women working as parole officers work for TDCJ. Depending on your attitude toward them, you can find them easy or hard to get along with. However, TDCJ has revised its policy of returning people to prison for petty violations. Texas parole officials are granted discretion as to when to initiate parole revocations, and they may not automatically initiate those proceedings if someone breaks a minor rule, such as missing a meeting or a fee payment, or testing positive for drugs. You may not get violated for missing a meeting or two, for having the occasional dirty UA, or for not making a payment on time. But this is like anything else; abuse it, and you lose the benefit of the doubt.

If you are sincere with your parole officer; if you show that you are looking for a job or have taken a job that doesn't pay too well and is hard and dirty but keeps you working; if you stay clean and go to meetings; if you keep them advised of what you're doing, where you're going, and make sincere efforts to be responsible and honest, then you won't have problems with your parole officers. But that extends to your life in general. You've been in prison. You are marked for life, and you may find that as a result of being incarcerated, you have a hard time getting work, getting an apartment, being accepted into school, or simply being accepted as a person who should be trusted. That's a fact of your life now.

You'll just have to build that trust all over again. No one can make you a dignified, trustworthy person but yourself. No matter what you did to get to prison, the person you are now and the person you will forever be depends on your attitude and your actions. Life will be hard, and you'll have moments when you just want to throw up your hands and return to your old friends, to the corners and the clubs and the game, because that's the easy way. Don't do it. Remember the sounds of keys clanging as the officers locked the iron doors behind you. Remember the idiocy of the hallways, the despair of never getting mail or visits, and the letters your family wrote you, pleading for your return. You can survive, and you can succeed, as a free person.

One thing you should not forget; there are always people, and organizations, willing to help you. As someone who has been incarcerated, I have reached out to and been extended support by many groups, one of which has gone to great lengths to research, write, and distribute this guide: the Texas Criminal Justice Coalition (TCJC). Based in Austin, the leadership and members of TCJC are deeply committed to humanizing every aspect of Texas criminal justice institutions. They have focused on writing, proposing, and then shepherding pertinent and timely bills through the Legislature, but if a person in incarceration writes them with a personal problem, the staff there will do everything humanly possible to help him or her. As someone who knows the tremendous amount of unreliable information that reaches those who are incarcerated, I would not have been willing to participate in the writing of this guide if I did not wholeheartedly believe in the sincerity of the people writing it and in the credibility of the information it will provide. Read this guide. Use it. It may be the most important resource you'll ever read. Good luck.

Getting Out

2009 State Legislative Session Updates – New Laws

❑ H.B. 93 – Receiving “Good Time”

“Good time” credit policies allow prison and jail administrators to deduct one or two days from an individual’s original sentence for each day he or she actually serves of that sentence, as long as no charge of misconduct has been sustained against the individual.

H.B. 93 allows for the restoration of lost good time in some cases. For eligible disciplinary violations, an individual’s good conduct time will be reinstated subject to maintaining good behavior. That is, his or her good conduct time will be placed in suspension following a major disciplinary offense, and that time will later be reinstated if the individual does not have any subsequent major disciplinary cases for 12 months. Any subsequent major disciplinary offense committed while time is suspended will result in the forfeiture of the suspended time.

Please note: Good conduct time will be forfeited for all Level 1 disciplinary offenses. Additionally, individuals with a conviction under Section 508.149 of the Government Code will not be eligible to receive restoration of their lost good conduct time. Individuals who become eligible for immediate release under discretionary mandatory supervision (DMS) due to the reinstatement of good conduct time will remain in custody while the notification of DMS consideration is processed.

❑ H.B. 498 – Investigating Wrongful Convictions

This bill creates the Timothy Cole Advisory Panel on Wrongful Convictions. The panel’s purpose is to investigate the causes leading to wrongful convictions and to submit a report on those findings to the state legislature by January 1, 2011. The panel will also make a recommendation to the state of whether creating a formal Innocence Commission is necessary. The Timothy Cole Advisory Panel will not look at specific cases, nor will it provide any investigation or representation in claims of actual innocence from incarcerated individuals.

❑ H.B. 3649 – Receiving Books in Prison

This bill allows eligible non-profit, religious, or civic organizations to send books and educational materials to people incarcerated at correctional facilities throughout Texas.

❑ H.B. 963 – Occupational Licensing Opportunities

This bill allows people who are enrolled or wanting to enroll in an educational program that issues an occupational license to request a criminal history evaluation to determine if they are eligible for the license. This ensures that people can confirm their eligibility status for the license before they commit to and prepare for an educational program. Note: This bill also includes an amendment that will increase employment opportunities for nonviolent, non 3-g offenders if they are in fact eligible to obtain an occupational license and if their past crime is not related to the occupational license they are attempting to obtain.”

❑ H.B. 1711 – Statewide Re-Entry Task Force

This bill requires the Texas Department of Criminal Justice (TDCJ) to establish and implement a comprehensive re-entry and reintegration plan for people released from prison. The bill also establishes a Re-entry Task Force to address the obstacles faced by people re-entering society after a period of incarceration. Some areas the Task Force will address include housing and employment barriers, family unity and participation, issues affecting people with special needs (such as those with mental illness or mental retardation, and the elderly), and many others.

❑ H.B. 2161 – Personal Identification Card

This bill requires TDCJ to notify the Department of Public Safety (DPS) no later than 90 days prior to a person’s transfer to pre-parole status that DPS should issue him or her a personal identification certificate if he or she does not possess a valid driver’s license or personal identification certificate. The bill also requires DPS to accept TDCJ-issued identification cards as satisfactory proof of identity.

Obtaining Identification Documents in Texas

HAVING PROPER IDENTIFICATION IS SO IMPORTANT TO A PERSON’S SUCCESS AFTER BEING released from prison. Having a TDCJ-ID card is not enough to get by. A state-issued identification card is essential to do many things necessary to successfully integrate into society. A social security card and birth certificate are both required to obtain a Texas state-issued ID card.

One of the first things a person should do after being released from prison is gather all necessary identification documents and store them somewhere safe. Some organizations and charities listed in Chapter 3: “Community Organizations” provide assistance in obtaining these documents. Otherwise, the information below and the resources contained elsewhere in this guide can help people get an ID and move further down the path to success.

❑ Social Security Card

A social security card is necessary to apply for a state-issued ID card or driver's license, receive state and federal benefits, and do many other things. An application for a social security card can be found at www.socialsecurity.gov/online/ss-5.html.

Alternatively, a person may wish to visit his or her local social security office and follow the steps below:

- Fill out SS-5 form (forms must be printed out in blue/black ink on 8.5"x11" paper).
- Take (or mail) the SS-5 to the nearest Social Security office. Remember to take the originals or certified copies of the supporting documents that accompany the form.
- Also take another form of identification. A birth certificate is not considered an acceptable form of ID; however, the following are accepted: driver's license, state ID, passport, marriage or divorce record, military records, military ID, student ID, life insurance policy, and TDCJ-ID card.

For more information about local office locations, call 1-800-772-1213 (TTY 1-800-325-0778), or use the Social Security Office Locator Service available at www.socialsecurity.gov/locator.

❑ Birth Certificate

A copy of one's birth certificate is a very important document to have. People should make copies of their certificates and keep the originals in a safe place. Costs vary by state to replace a lost certificate; in Texas, copies cost around $20. A copy of a birth certificate may be obtained from the Vital Records Office in the county in which a person was born. For those born in a state other than Texas, the following website has the contact and cost information for every Vital Records Office in the United States: www.cdc.gov/nchs/w2w.htm.

Another form of identification is required to obtain a birth certificate. The following is a list of acceptable forms of ID: state-issued driver's license; state ID card; student ID; government employee badge; TDCJ-ID card; military ID; or two documents with the person's name on them, such as a utility bill or Social Security card. One of these documents must contain the person's signature.

❑ State Identification Card

If a person has not already obtained a Texas state-issued identification card before leaving TDCJ, he or she must visit the Department of Public Safety and bring either two secondary documents or one secondary document and two supporting documents. Secondary identification documents include the following: a birth certificate, a state ID or driver's license, an original or certified copy of a court order with the person's name and date of birth, and military records. Supporting identification documents may include the following: school records, an insurance policy, a vehicle title, marriage or divorce records, a voter registration card, a social security card, or a TDCJ-ID card.

❑ Voter Registration Card

Registering to vote in Texas is free of charge and can be done at any library, post office, or Department of Public Safety Office. People can mail their registration cards (postage-free) or take them to the local Tax Assessor-Collector Office. To register, a person must be a U.S. Citizen, at least 18 years of age, a resident of the county in which he or she is registering, not declared mentally incompetent by a court of law, and not a convicted felon (unless one's sentence, probation and/or parole are completed). Note: People must bring one additional form of identification with them.

Those with access to the internet may find the following resources helpful in obtaining identification documents:

- Texas Department of State Health Services

People can order birth, death, marriage, and divorce verifications online at www.texasonline.state.tx.us/tolapp/ovra.

- Department of Public Safety

DPS's website provides information on how to get a driver's license or state-issued ID, including a list of supporting identification documents: www.txdps.state.tx.us/administration/driver_licensing_control/pages/identificationrequirements.htm.

- The National Archives

People can request copies of military personnel records online at www.archives.gov/veterans/evetrecs/index.html.

Child Support

ONCE RELEASED FROM PRISON, A PERSON HAS MANY OBLIGATIONS, especially during the first few weeks. Although all of them may seem important, it is crucial to pay child support. Those who do not pay court-required child support can severely impact their re-entry and perhaps end up back in the criminal justice system. As many know, people who were required to pay child support before going to prison continue to have that obligation during incarceration. The amount owed may have added up over the months or years, with additional interest,¹ which could total a large sum.

It is important for people to contact the local child support office handling their case and openly discuss their situation (see the contact list on the next page). Office staff may be able to place a temporary hold on legal action if a person can show that he or she is looking for employment or providing some support to his or her child(ren).² The local child support office can also provide referrals to parenting programs, as well as job-assistance and community assistance resources.³ Furthermore, a case manager may be able to conduct a new Child Support Review. Either way, touching base with the office handling one’s case is a great start – it tells the office that this person intends to fulfill his or her obligation and honor the child support order.

Please note: A child support order can be changed but only by the court. Grounds for changing an order may include a substantial change in the circumstances of the child or one of the parents.⁴ If a person falls behind on child support payments, enforcement measures may be instated, including having child support deducted from one’s paycheck, losing income tax refund checks or lottery winnings, having a suspended driver’s license, professional license, or other license, or being sued so that the court will enforce the order. A judge may also send a nonpaying parent to jail.⁵

Note additionally: During incarceration, a child support order can be modified by requesting a court to review the order in light of one’s present situation. While there is no guarantee that the court will grant a modification, it is important that a judge reviews the current support order given the circumstances.

Money Management

GETTING ON THE RIGHT FINANCIAL TRACK CAN BE A LONG AND DIFFICULT PROCESS, ESPECIALLY for people who have not managed a bank account, balanced a checkbook, or had a steady paycheck in many months or years. As such, people should establish a money management plan early on that will benefit them in the future. “Smart Ways to Handle Your Money,” an article from the National Endowment for Financial Education, gives advice to previously incarcerated individuals on how to handle their money.

Those who owed money to creditors before going to prison will likely be expected to pay upon release from confinement. People should create a list of every creditor (or person) that they owe money to, and how much each is owed. That will help them create a payment plan that adequately meets the minimum balance, plus a little extra. People with large debts may also wish to consult with a Credit Counseling Agency, which assists individuals in consolidating and eliminating debt.

In any successful money management plan, a person must be able to distinguish between needs and wants. Needs are things that one cannot live without (clothing, food, shelter, medical care, etc.). Wants can also be necessities but include those items that are more expensive and may be considered luxuries. People can reduce impulse spending by establishing a monthly budget. By avoiding individuals and situations that lead to spending in excess of the budget, people will be in a better position to meet their money management plan and their future goals, and they can eventually achieve financial success.

Transportation

TRANSPORTATION IS A SIGNIFICANT BARRIER FACED BY PEOPLE RE-ENTERING THE COMMUNITY.

Many people may not have a driver's license or car right away, which prevents them from getting to appointments with a parole officer or doctor, or to other important engagements. The information below provides general information related to public transportation in major regions. Interested individuals should visit the websites in each section for more thorough information and fare information, which is current as of April, 2010, but should be verified before riding. For more information about public transportation options in these and other areas, individuals should call 2-1-1 (a resource which is discussed more fully on page 181).

❑ Amarillo and the Panhandle

The Amarillo City Transit serves the City of Amarillo with eight fixed-route bus lines. All buses can accommodate individuals with disabilities. One-way fares begin at $.75. For more information, call (806) 378-3095 or visit www.ci.amarillo.tx.us.

Panhandle Transit provides public transportation across 26 counties and 64 towns, with transportation to rural counties available by calling the nearest PCS center and making a reservation. Fares are based on mileage (17.5 cents per mile with a maximum cost of $17.50). In-town service is $1.00 for a one-way ride. Discounted fares and weekly and monthly passes are also available. For more information, visit www.panhandletransit.com.

❑ Austin

Capital Metro serves Austin and the surrounding suburbs and incorporates hundreds of routes throughout the city. All buses are handicap-accessible, and many are equipped with bike racks. Capital Metro has also recently established a 32-mile Metro Rail commuter system that takes riders from Leander to downtown Austin during high-peak hours.

Regular fares are $1.00 each way and $2.00 for a 24-hour pass. Monthly bus passes offer a discount, and additional discounts are available for disabled individuals. Van-pooling is also available for $60 per month and can serve up to 12 individuals. For more information about these and other programs, visit www.capmetro.org.

❑ Corpus Christi

The Corpus Christi Regional Transportation Authority provides public transportation services to residents of Nueces County and San Patricio County. Fares begin at $.75 for a one-way trip and $1.75 for a 24-hour pass. Monthly passes are available at a discounted rate. Individuals with a disability ride free of charge. For more information, visit www.ccrta.org.

❑ Dallas

Dallas Area Rapid Transportation (DART) provides extensive transportation services to 13 cities with rail, bus, HOV lanes, and rideshare services. Buses are equipped to transport individuals with disabilities, and most provide bike racks. Van-pools are also available and some are subsidized by employers. Single-ride fares start at $1.75 with discounted rates for seniors, children, Medicare cardholders, and the disabled. For more information on DART and related transportation programs, visit www.dart.org.

❑ Denton

The Denton County Transportation Authority provides public transportation services to residents of Denton and Greater Lewisville. Regional commuter service is equipped to accommodate disabled riders. Fares for a single ride begin at $1.25 with discounted fares available for children, the elderly, and the disabled. For more information, visit www.dcta.net.

❑ El Paso

Sun Metro provides public bus transportation to the residents of El Paso and surrounding suburbs. Sun Metro also offers a program called Job Express, which provides support to individuals transitioning from welfare to work with transportation to job training, education, employment, and childcare destinations. For more information, visit www.ci.el-paso.tx.us/sunmetro/sunpro.asp#.

❑ Fort Worth

The T is Fort Worth's major public transportation service and provides both buses and a commuter rail. Buses are built to accommodate passengers with disabilities and those riding with a bicycle. The Trinity Railway Express specifically allows passengers to commute between Fort Worth and Dallas from Monday through Saturday. Additional transportation services are available to disabled passengers. Fares begin at $1.50 for a one-way ride with discounts available for children, the elderly, and the disabled. Weekly and monthly passes are also available. For more information, visit www.the-t.com.

❑ Galveston

Island Transit provides Galveston with public transportation, including a trolley system. Services for disabled passengers are provided. Fares range from $.50 to $1.50 for a one-way ride, and discounted monthly passes are available. For more information, call the customer service line at (409) 797-3900 or visit www.islandtransit.net.

❑ Houston

Houston Metro serves the city of Houston and surrounding suburbs by providing hundreds of routes throughout the city. The disabled are accommodated on all city buses, and bike racks are also available on most bus routes. Houston Metro also operates MetroRail – a 7.5-mile light rail transportation service – as well as MetroLift, which provides pre-scheduled curb-to-curb transportation for individuals with disabilities. Van-pooling is also available for $35 per month. General fares range from $1.25 to $4.50 with discounted rates for students, seniors, and the disabled. For more information about these and other programs, visit www.ridemetro.org.

❑ Lubbock

Citibus provides public transportation services to the city of Lubbock. Transit services for the disabled are available. Fares range from $.75 to $1.50, and day, week, and month passes are available at a discounted rate. For more information, visit www.citibus.com.

❑ San Antonio

VIA public transportation serves the city of San Antonio with a fixed-route bus system. Services for the disabled are available. VIA also operates a van-pool for groups of six individuals or more. Full fares start at $1.10, and reduced fares for children, students, the elderly, and the disabled begin at $.55. For more information, call (210) 362-2555 or visit www.viainfo.net.

PART TWO: COMMUNITY RESOURCES

The information in the following seven chapters should be used as a starting point to begin a successful re-entry experience back into the community. Each chapter covers a general subject area associated with re-entry. Please use the resources at the end of each chapter to continue researching specific topics.

THE FOLLOWING CHAPTERS INCLUDE RESOURCES ORGANIZED BY FIVE MAJOR REGIONS:

Central Texas, Northeast and East Texas, South and Southeast Texas, West Texas, and the High Plains. The cities included in each region are listed below.

Community Organizations

Introduction

THE FOLLOWING CHAPTERS CONTAIN RESOURCES WITH CONTACT INFORMATION FOR ORGANIZATIONS that may benefit people upon release from confinement. Each entry has the name of the organization, address, phone number, and website (if available), in addition to a brief description of what services the organization offers. These resources are organized into five major geographic regions: Central Texas (including Austin and San Antonio), Northeast and East Texas (Dallas and Fort Worth), South and Southeast Texas (Houston and Corpus Christi), West Texas (El Paso), and High Plains (Amarillo). The introduction to Part Two (pages 22-23) lists the cities designated within each region so people can locate their city and coordinating region.

After finding resources for a particular area, we recommend that people call an organization before attempting to use its services. People should ensure that services are still available, as well as ask if the organization has any eligibility requirements to use the services. During the call, people can also ask for more information about available programs.

A person should note that if a particular organization is unable to assist him or her at the present time, it is acceptable to ask to be put on a waiting list. The organization may also have other resources or referrals available. It never hurts to ask.

Lastly, people can call an organization to get directions, check its hours of operation, or ask any other questions.

Additional Resources

In addition to the resources listed later in this chapter, people can check out the following:

❑ Reentry and Integration Division Hotline

The following toll-free number has been established to assist people who are re-entering society, as well as their families and the general public who may have questions related to programs and resources: 1-877-887-6151.

❑ 2-1-1

A great place to begin looking for help is by calling 2-1-1. It provides free and confidential information and referrals to organizations that can assist people with food, housing, employment, health care, counseling, and more. People can dial 2-1-1 from any telephone and tell the operator what information they are seeking. People can also visit www.211.org and search for needed information.

❑ Restorative Justice Community (RJC) of Texas

RJC of Texas provides an excellent, comprehensive internet-based directory of organizations that serve people who are re-entering Texas communities after a period of incarceration. Resources span a variety of services – including housing, employment, and community assistance – and they are updated regularly.

Visit RJC of Texas online at www.rjctexas.org/Home.htm. Click the “Directory” link at the top of the page to begin searching for resources throughout Texas.

SPOTLIGHT ON: CRIME PREVENTION INSTITUTE

The Crime Prevention Institute (CPI), located in Austin, opened in 1992 to address the underlying causes of crime and break the cycle of criminal behavior. Today, CPI continues to provide pre- and post-release services to individuals re-entering the community from the Travis Unit State Jail. Specifically, the agency works to strengthen individuals, families, and communities through education, information sharing, resources, and case management. Case managers work one-on-one with clients to ensure that they have access to the tools and support needed to gain and maintain employment. Their staff meets clients where they are – in their homes, in jail, and on the streets – to ensure that these individuals are prepared for life on the outside as productive members of the Austin/Travis County community.

CPI understands that many previously incarcerated individuals face numerous barriers to living successful, crime-free lives, and they are often released directly into homelessness, unable to meet their basic needs. CPI administers two unique programs through which it delivers services to help individuals overcome barriers to re-entry and improve their chances of living self-sufficient, law-abiding lives.

The Targeted Project Re-Enterprise (TPRE) program, a partnership with the City of Austin and Travis County, helps men build a clear path for a successful transition through gainful employment. Specifically, CPI works with men incarcerated in Travis Unit State Jail – both before and after they are released – to help them prepare for and find meaningful employment.

Prior to release, all participants receive a comprehensive assessment of substance abuse, mental health, and risk for re-offense. They take classes on preparing job applications and succeeding in interviews. They also attend a 20-week transition preparation support group and work one-on-one with a case manager to develop personal goals and a release plan. After their release, the men are provided transportation assistance, clothing, hygiene products, work supplies, bus passes, job placement assistance, individualized support, and financial incentives at 30, 60, and 90 days of employment. CPI also hosts a weekly support group in downtown Austin where clients and previous program participants can come together to find stability, share job leads, and encourage one another in the pursuit of a crime-free life.

In 1998, CPI developed the Enterprising Girl Scouts Beyond Bars (EGSBB) program, in partnership with the Girl Scouts Lone Star Council, the YWCA, and the University of Texas School of Social Work, to foster relationships between incarcerated mothers and their daughters. The EGSBB program strives to keep young girls with incarcerated mothers from developing negative behavior patterns by providing counseling, case management, employment placement assistance, group therapy, drug treatment, and job preparation skills and training. The ultimate goals of the program are to improve the mother-daughter relationship, improve self-image and self-esteem, and assist the mothers in becoming active, employed, and involved parents.

CPI has been recognized for its outstanding efforts in re-entry with numerous awards, including the 2005 Mental Health Association of Texas Ring of Honor Award, the 2006 Dell Volunteers of Distinction Award, and the 2006 Greenlights for Nonprofit Success Nonny Award – Most Unique Collaboration.

Housing

Introduction

FINDING HOUSING IS THE CORNERSTONE OF A SUCCESSFUL TRANSITION BACK TO THE COMMUNITY. Unfortunately, it also presents one of the largest challenges to people leaving prison. While there are many options available to those returning to their community – from limited-stay shelters to halfway houses – options may be limited depending on one’s specific situation. For instance, people required to wear an electronic monitor device as a condition of parole may not be able to stay at every facility due to cabling restrictions and costs. People convicted of a sex offense (who are required to register as a sex offender for any period of time) may not be able to stay at some locations due to their proximity to schools, churches, or playgrounds.

The resources contained in this chapter are intended to be used as transitional housing – not as long-term housing (more than one year). A person’s time at these facilities should be spent looking for employment and getting one’s life in order so that long-term housing in the future is a real possibility.

Parole officers may have additional resources regarding housing options. Chapter 3: “Community Organizations” may also list additional housing resources worth looking into. Look everywhere and do not be afraid to ask for help.

Using This Chapter

PEOPLE SHOULD LOCATE THE ORGANIZATIONS AND GROUPS THAT WILL LIKELY BE OF MOST ASSISTANCE. We have tried our best to include whether or not each facility will accept those who have committed sex offenses or violent offenses, or those on electronic monitors. If that information is not listed, interested individuals should call the facility and ask them directly what its policies or eligibility requirements are.

We also recommend that people call an organization to verify that the information in this guide is current before relying on it as a potential resource. During the call, people can also ask for more information about available programs. A person should note that if a particular organization is unable to assist him or her at the present time, it is acceptable to ask to be put on a waiting list. The organization may also have other resources or referrals available. It never hurts to ask.

Lastly, people can call an organization to get directions, check its hours of operation, or ask any other questions.

In addition to the resources listed later in this chapter, people can check out the following:

❑ The Housing Assistance Program (THAP)

H.B. 3226 (effective 2009) creates a housing assistance program available to certain people who are awaiting release from TDCJ. The program applies only to those who have been approved for parole or mandatory supervision but who are waiting for a halfway house placement. The program does not apply to people who are released under a “serve-all” sentence or who have housing provided by their family or friends.

Essentially, the bill allows TDCJ to provide payment vouchers for temporary housing in a community-based housing facility in the county of the person’s release (rather than requiring people to wait for a TDCJ-sponsored halfway house to become available. The amount of payment issued through the housing voucher may not exceed the cost that TDCJ would pay to incarcerate a person for the same period of time that the voucher is issued for. Housing providers must have a plan to offer food, clothing, and hygiene products to residents.

No application process is necessary to be considered for the program. Individuals will be identified for potential placement in THAP if they are eligible for release on or after January 1, 2010, and if they remain incarcerated pending a housing placement plan. Additionally, in regards to those released on or after this date who are placed at a residential re-entry center, they will be notified of THAP availability by their supervising officer.

Please note: The program cannot be used to reimburse family members or friends who allow re-entering individuals to live with them.

❑ A Note About Public Housing

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) provides federal funding to local Housing Authorities that provide “quality affordable homes for all” throughout the United States.⁶ While policies will vary from county to county, most HUD-funded housing requires a local housing authority to deny assistance in some cases. Specifically, assistance may be denied if any member of the household is using illegal drugs or has been evicted from federally funded housing during the previous three years for drug use. Likewise, applicants for housing can be denied if they have engaged in any violent criminal act, committed robbery, or are required to register for life under a state sex offender registration program.⁷

Neither an arrest nor conviction for the above-mentioned crimes is necessary to deny an applicant. That means re-entering individuals must be careful if they plan to stay with family members who currently reside in federally funded housing. If a re-entering individual was involved in a criminal act up to 10 years before moving in or within 10 years of being released from incarceration (whichever is more restrictive), those family members could be evicted.

Additional Resources

- ❑ 2-1-1 is a great place to begin looking for help. It provides free and confidential information and referrals to organizations that can assist people with food, housing, employment, health care, counseling, and more. People can dial 2-1-1 from any telephone and tell the operator what information they are seeking. People can also visit www.211.org and search for needed information.
- ❑ National Coalition for the Homeless has a directory of shelters and homeless assistance programs online. This service does not list every program in the country, so people should check their phone books for local programs. For more information, call 1-800-838-4357 or visit www.nchv.org.
- ❑ Texas Homeless Network provides a directory of organizations that offer assistance to homeless individuals. For more information, call 1-800-531-0828 or visit www.thn.org.
- ❑ The Department of Housing and Urban Development provides a list of emergency shelters for men, women, and families throughout the United States at www.hud.gov/homeless.
- ❑ Texas Low Income Housing Information Service works to support low-income Texans seeking to have a decent home in a quality neighborhood. For more information, visit 508 Powell Street, Austin, TX 78703-5122, call (512) 477-8910, ext. 4, or visit www.texashousing.org.

Spotlight On: Oxford House

Oxford Houses are self-run, self-supported homes for individuals recovering from alcohol and drug addiction. The Oxford House Program provides individuals with a substance-free living environment entirely supported by the members of the home. Financial responsibilities are handled by the residents in each house, making a cooperative measure necessary for the success of the residents. Home tasks and activities are led by an officer of each house; officers are elected by other residents of the home and serve a six-month term before another election is held. Relapse is a large concern within the Oxford House system and is taken very seriously. If at any point the majority of the residents feel as if officers or other residents have relapsed, they will be expelled from the residence.

Oxford Houses must consist of at least 6 residents; however, the majority of Oxford houses have anywhere from 8 to 15 members so that the financial responsibilities are evenly and fairly distributed. Each member is expected to contribute money towards rent, utilities, food, and any other household needs. The average cost per resident can vary from $85-$150 per week. Oxford Houses do not have a minimum or maximum stay requirement; instead, a focus is placed on avoiding relapse and truly recovering from addiction in a supportive environment.

Individuals interested in becoming a resident of a local Oxford House can fill out an application. This is followed by an interview conducted by the existing members of the house to which each individual applies. If there is a vacancy and 80% of the members approve an individual's application, he or she is free to move in.

For more information on the Oxford House program, visit www.oxfordhouse.org. Information related to starting an Oxford House is available, as well as an application for residency. Below are listings of Oxford Houses throughout Texas, as organized by city. Interested individuals should check the website for the most up-to-date information about new houses in their area.

Community Health Support

Introduction

HEALTH CARE CONCERNS ARE A VERY IMPORTANT PIECE OF THE RE-ENTRY PUZZLE. INCARCERATED individuals, on average, require more health care than most Americans because of poverty, substance abuse, mental illness, and lack of access to medical services in the free world.⁸ When they leave confinement, those who are carrying a communicable disease put their spouses/partners, children, friends, and co-workers at risk. This is especially alarming considering 1.5 million people are released from U.S. jails and prisons per year with a life-threatening infectious disease.⁹ The devastation of contracting such an illness can disrupt a person's efforts to re-enter society and become self-reliant.

A separate concern is that nearly everyone released from prison has a chronic health condition that requires ongoing treatment. In fact, most have a combination of physical, mental health, and addiction conditions.¹⁰ Studies have shown that people who do not receive sufficient medical care after their release are more likely to return to prison. That is why existing individuals must plan a health care regimen that will address their physical, mental, and emotional well-being. Such a plan may include a continuation of the services they were receiving in prison with the help of their parole officer or TCOOMMI (an agency which is described more fully on pages 155-156). Or, they may for the first time begin to consider their physical and mental health care needs. This may involve reaching out to community organizations that provide mental health and substance abuse-related services, which can have long-term positive effects on one's life and one's family, or it may involve counseling and therapy, which help people find every opportunity to succeed in society.

Either way, this chapter is a good place to begin the search for community-based treatment options. It includes organizations that offer low-cost or no-cost health care resources, including mental health and substance abuse resources. Additionally, this chapter offers information on available TCOOMMI and MHMR programs, as well as information about federal assistance programs (such as Social Security), which can be found on page 182.

Once released from prison, some people may be eligible for certain benefits and services. Those who were previously enrolled in a Medicaid program before incarceration may still be eligible upon release.¹¹ Interested individuals should ask their parole officers for more information or contact the nearest Medicaid office or Social Security benefits office. For more information on benefits and assistance, see Chapter 7.

Using This Chapter

PEOPLE SHOULD LOCATE THE ORGANIZATIONS AND GROUPS THAT WILL LIKELY BE OF MOST ASSISTANCE.

We have tried our best to include all relevant information, but if it is not listed, people can call the facility and ask them directly for more information. We also recommend that people call an organization to verify that the information in this guide is current before counting on it as a potential resource.

During the call, people can also ask for more information about available programs. And because these resources are intended to be low-cost and community friendly, people should check to see if there is a charge for services and, if so, how much. Each facility may offer funding assistance through a state, city, or county program, so callers should be honest about their situation and communicate their needs to the facility.

A person should note that if a particular organization is unable to assist him or her at the present time, it is acceptable to ask to be put on a waiting list. The organization may also have other resources or referrals available. It never hurts to ask.

Lastly, people can call an organization to get directions, check its hours of operation, or ask any other questions.

Additional Resources

In addition to the resources listed later in this chapter, people can check out the following:

- ❑ 2-1-1 is a great place to begin looking for help. It provides free and confidential information and referrals to organizations that can assist people with food, housing, employment, health care, counseling, and more. People can dial 2-1-1 from any telephone and tell the operator what information they are seeking. People can also visit www.211.org and search for needed information.
- ❑ Department of State and Health Services (DSHS) can tell you where to find health care facilities. Check the phone book blue pages under local, city, or county government for the number, or visit www.dshs.state.tx.us/services.shtm.
- ❑ Free clinics are run by many local organizations and communities. Check the phone book blue pages under “Public Health” to contact the local government office for clinics.

- ❑ National Alliance for the Mentally Ill lists community mental health services providers at www.nami.org, or available by calling 1-800-950-6264.
- ❑ National Mental Health Association offers support groups, rehabilitation, socialization, and housing services through 340 community organizations located across the country. For more information, call 1-800-969-NMHA, or find a local office at www.nmha.org.
- ❑ The Federal Substance Abuse & Mental Health Services Administration's Treatment Referral Routing Service provides references to local programs, available by calling 1-800-662-4357.
- ❑ Texas Department of State Health Services provides a 24-hour hotline and referral service at 1-877-966-3784.
- ❑ Focus On Recovery Helpline is a 24-hour national alcohol and drug abuse addiction and treatment hotline, available at 1-800-888-9383.

Spotlight On: Local Mental Health Service Providers

The Texas Department of State Health Services provides community mental health services at local Mental Health and Mental Retardation (MHMR) offices. Most MHMR centers require a diagnosis of a mental illness (usually depression, bipolar disorder, or schizophrenia), and may also require that a person establish residency.

Interested individuals should call 2-1-1 to locate local services and take an over-the-phone screening to determine eligibility. An on-line screening form is available at www.yourtexasbenefits.com.

Individuals who wish to apply for services must visit a Health and Human Services Commission (HHSC) Benefits Office. (Note: Individuals with certain limitations, including those who are ill or are in bad weather, may speak with staff over the phone.) For faster service, individuals planning to visit an office should print out the online application and complete it prior to the visit. Also, it is recommended that people arrive early to the office to avoid long wait lines.

In addition to the completed online form, people should bring all verification documents needed for the benefits being applied for. These documents provide evidence of the information submitted in the application, including proof of earned income, expenses, etc. Specific examples of verification documents include a birth certificate, pay stub, and utility bill. The verification documents will vary based on the program being applied for and each person's unique situation. HHSC will provide notification of any verification documents needed and the deadline for submitting them.

The HHSC has also developed a substance abuse benefit program for individuals who receive Medicaid. These services will become effective as of September 2010. Services include detoxification, limited residential treatment, outpatient detoxification, medication-assisted treatment, specialized residential services for women, and outpatient chemical dependency counseling. For more information, visit www.hhsc.state.tx.us/SubstanceAbuseBenefit.shtml. A more detailed summary of services offered, including eligibility requirements, is available at www.hhsc.state.tx.us/BenefitsSummary.doc.

For more information about the Texas Health and Human Services Commission, visit www.hhsc.state.tx.us/index.shtml.

Regional MHMR Offices

Most MHMR offices have both a crisis phone number and an office phone number. The crisis phone number is for people facing an emergency situation, such as having homicidal or suicidal thoughts. People should use the main phone number to contact an office for an appointment or to ask for more information about eligibility and programs.

Spotlight On: Texas Correctional Office on Offenders with Medical or Mental Impairments

In 1987, the Texas Legislature recognized the need to address the particular issues facing incarcerated individuals and parolees with special needs. In response, it created the Texas Correctional Office on Offenders with Medical and Mental Impairments (TCOOMMI). TCOOMMI is overseen by a diverse advisory committee of representatives and advocates from juvenile and adult criminal justice agencies, health and human services, and community organizations that continually work to develop a seamless system of comprehensive care for juveniles and adults with special needs.

Individuals eligible for TCOOMMI services include those with a diagnosis of a serious mental illness (major depression, schizophrenia, or bipolar disorder), mental retardation, a terminal or serious medical condition, a physical disability, or those who are elderly.

TCOOMMI-eligibility priority is given to:

- Individuals on parole who were assessed and referred to the program prior to their release
- Individuals being released from Substance Abuse Felony Punishment facilities
- Mentally impaired individuals incarcerated in local jails

TCOOMMI provides both community-based interventions and institutional services. Institutional services for incarcerated individuals include:

- Pre-release screening and referral to aftercare treatment services for those referred from the Correctional Institutions Division, state jails, local jails, or other referral sources
- Joint treatment planning with criminal justice agencies, social services, health and human service agencies, and other appropriate disciplines
- Medically Recommended Intensive Supervision (MRIS)

The MRIS program provides for the early parole review and release of certain categories of incarcerated individuals who are mentally ill, mentally retarded, physically disabled, elderly, terminally ill, or in need of long-term care. The purpose of MRIS is to release individuals who pose minimal public safety risk from incarceration into more cost-effective alternatives. The MRIS program excludes individuals sentenced to death, and limits the eligibility of those with sex offenses and those with aggravated convictions.

Community based interventions are available through 32 MHMR program offices across the state. Depending on the needs of the participants, TCOOMMI community and crisis intervention services include:

- Case management
- Psychiatric services
- Medical services, including hospice and medication monitoring
- Substance abuse services
- Social security eligibility processing
- Crisis management services
- Pre-vocational training
- Supported employment
- Court intervention and legal advocacy

Similar services for juveniles are available through the Texas Youth Commission and the Texas Juvenile Probation Commission.

TCOOMMI programs and services are designed specifically to demonstrate a multi-service approach for more cost-effective and appropriate alternatives to incarceration for juveniles and adults with special needs and mental impairments. Throughout its existence, TCOOMMI has demonstrated successful strategies for ensuring public safety, delivering necessary services to those with special needs, and reducing recidivism.

Employment

Introduction

FINDING EMPLOYMENT AFTER BEING RELEASED FROM PRISON – ESPECIALLY AFTER SERVING A lengthy sentence – may seem like an impossible task. Regardless of one’s skill level, resources are available to assist re-entering individuals develop their job readiness and résumé skills, and prepare them for today’s workforce.

For those who will be living in a transitional housing facility upon release, the director may be able to offer additional resources, including workforce development trainings, employment resources, and educational classes. Interested individuals should check with their case manager or the director of the home for a list of all available resources and programs that may be of assistance. It never hurts to ask for help!

Additionally, people should not forget about the community organizations in their area that may provide additional resources free of charge. Examples of the programs these organizations offer include job readiness training, résumé writing help, job interview assistance, references, and more. For more information on local community organizations, see Chapter 3.

The Right Against Discrimination in the Workplace

ACCORDING TO THE UNITED STATES EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY COMMISSION (EEOC), IT IS unlawful under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 for any place of employment to exclude individuals from employment based on their conviction record. It has been shown that such discrimination has an adverse impact on African-Americans and Hispanics due to their higher conviction rates.¹² Regardless, this law is rarely enforced and many employers have policies that are in violation of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. Additionally, there is no federal law that directly prohibits employment discrimination based on a criminal record.¹³

In Texas, for all positions in which a person is expected to earn less than $75,000 per year, employers may hire an individual if there has been a period of seven years since their conviction, end of parole, or release from prison. Also, employers may not use a deferred adjudication disposition as a basis for denial of employment.¹⁴ However, employers are allowed to ask about a person's arrests and whether or not any arrests led to a conviction. If an arrest did not lead to a conviction and the person was not convicted of a felony for up to five years before the date of the arrest, then an individual is entitled to expungement. When a record is expunged, it is removed from public view and will no longer appear on the county clerk's website or computer database. Criminal convictions themselves cannot be sealed, but records relating to a conviction that is overturned by the Court of Appeals may be expunged. (Note: When a record is sealed, it is permanently removed from public access or view.)

Employers also have the right to ask about and conduct an adult criminal record search to make job or other employment decisions. However, the type of conviction should typically be related to an applicant's eligibility for a job. For example, an employer has the right to deny a person for a child-care position if he or she has been convicted of a sexual offense, because the employer wants to ensure the safety of the children who are being cared for at the facility.¹⁵ In Texas, individuals convicted of violent, sexual, and other specified felonies are also restricted from employment in home health care agencies.¹⁶

Although it can be difficult for a person with a criminal record to get a job, one can certainly improve his or her chances for employment. Local community organizations can help job-seekers with criminal records by providing resources and training to those who want to strengthen their job skill set in areas such as computer training. Interested individuals should use the resources in this chapter and throughout this guide for assistance.

Workforce Development for the Disabled

The following resources may be helpful to individuals with disabilities entering the workforce:

❑ Easter Seals of Central Texas, Inc.

Getting a Job

❑ The Job Search

People can search for job opportunities in several ways. Although some may face additional barriers depending on their records, having determination and using the resources listed in this chapter can help people find employment and lead to a more successful re-entry.

Once a person has found a place to stay after returning to the community, the first step is to reach out to groups who work with previously incarcerated individuals. Many transitional housing facilities may provide employment assistance. Those who are staying at a halfway house or transitional housing facility should check with the program director for any available resources. The facility may have information that can save residents time and energy with their job search.

The organizations listed in the following pages are a great place to start looking for a job. These groups have experience working with individuals with a criminal background. Many also provide application tips, interview skills, and other programs intended to assist previously incarcerated individuals return to the workforce. Interested individuals should call each group first and inquire directly about what services may be available, and what the costs are for the services (if any).

Spotlight On: Texas Workforce Commission

Employment is the cornerstone of self-sufficiency, but it is also one of the biggest hurdles that previously incarcerated individuals face when released from jail or prison. Employers are often hesitant to hire job-seekers with a history of dishonest behavior. To encourage employers to hire previously incarcerated individuals and to alleviate employer concerns about the potential risks, the Texas Workforce Commission has created an incentive program that provides free fidelity bonding coverage to employers.

Fidelity bonds are essentially “employee dishonesty insurance.” Fidelity bonds protect employers against employee acts of dishonesty such as larceny, embezzlement, and theft. In the event that a business does experience a loss (either of money or property) by a bonded employee, the coverage would provide compensation to the employer for that loss.

Fidelity bond incentives are available to employers considering an at-risk job applicant whose background may lead employers to typically deny them a job. Applicants eligible for bonding include:

- Previously incarcerated individuals, including those with records of arrest, probation, or any police record
- Recovering substance abusers
- Welfare recipients
- Applicants with poor credit history, including those who have declared bankruptcy
- Disadvantaged youth without a work history
- Veterans dishonorably discharged from the military

An employer or a job applicant may request fidelity bonding assistance through the nearest Texas Workforce Center. There are no forms for the employer or job applicant to fill out and no processing; coverage can be activated almost immediately.

Free bond coverage can only be issued for $5,000 for a six-month period. After this period, if no claims have been made, an additional six months of coverage can be purchased through Traveler’s Property Casualty Insurance. Bonds only cover a specific employer-employee relationship that must be documented through tax and social security withholdings. Fidelity bonds do not provide coverage to contract employees or self-employed individuals, and they do not provide coverage for job injuries or work accidents.

For more information about obtaining fidelity bonding services, contact a local Texas Workforce Center or call 1-800-453-8140.

□ Applying for a Job

■ Résumés and Cover Letters

Some people have little to no experience creating a résumé or writing a cover letter. Though these are not necessarily an essential part of gaining employment, they can show a potential employer that a person has put time and effort into a professional document and that the applicant is serious about finding a job.

The tips below will help guide those of you who want to create an appropriate résumé for your work history with a cover letter that gets into the hands of the right person. But do not forget the resources listed earlier in this chapter, as many of the programs listed provide résumé writing classes free of charge.

■ Tips on Writing a Cover Letter¹⁷

A cover letter is a typed letter that accompanies your résumé. It is usually addressed to the individual who is in charge of hiring or the director of the Human Resources department. This letter expresses your intent to apply for a position in the company while listing your qualifications or any special training that would improve your chances of being hired. Use the tips below when crafting your cover letter.

- Where possible, address your letter to a specific individual rather than the generic “To Whom It May Concern.” Use the person’s title if they have one, and spell his or her name correctly.
- If you have any special training or skills that you have learned either in prison or in the free world, include them in the cover letter. The goal of a cover letter is to encourage a potential employer to read your résumé and contact you for an interview.
- Cover letters should be short, simple, and straightforward. Many are only a few paragraphs.
- Always read your letter carefully for spelling, punctuation, and grammar errors before mailing it. A fresh pair of eyes is extremely helpful in spotting mistakes you may have overlooked, so have another person read your letter for any errors you may have missed.
- Keep a copy of the letters you send and follow up if you do not hear back.
- A cover letter is not the appropriate place to discuss your incarceration, criminal history, salary requirements, or other related matters. Save these discussions for the interview.

■ Job Applications & Interviews¹⁸

Knowing how to properly fill out a job application is an important skill. A good application is the best way to get to the next step: the interview. The following tips will guide those of you who are beginning the application process.

¹⁷ Adapted from “The Ex-Offender’s Job Search Companion,” (2005): 50.

¹⁸ Adapted from “The Ex-Offender’s Job Search Companion,” (2005).

- First impressions are important, especially during your job search. Your appearance, including the way you dress combined with personal grooming, is the first thing you communicate about yourself to others. Dress neatly when you go to pick up a job application. Specifically, wear clothes that are clean and appropriate for a business setting. This means no jeans, baseball caps, or sleeveless shirts.
- Also, cover visible tattoos, do not wear any elaborate or “loud” jewelry, and do not use an excessive amount of perfume or cologne. These things can be distracting. Less is best in these types of situations.
- Remember, never smoke or chew gum while picking up an application. And always smile – employers like to hire cheerful people.
- Be prepared before you apply. Take with you the information you know you will need to adequately fill out the application. This may include a list of previous employers (with names and contact information), your social security card, your driver’s license or state-issued identification, and references.
- Always read the application completely before filling it out, and write legibly. If an employer cannot read your application you will not likely be asked for an interview. If a certain portion of the application does not apply to you, do not leave it blank. Instead write “N/A” (not applicable) in the space provided.
- Include all previous employers, even if you were fired from the job. Remember, prison job experience is considered work experience. You may wish to list this particular job as a state or federal job, for example “Cook, State of Texas.” Do not try to hide the fact that you have been incarcerated.
- If the application asks you if you have ever been convicted of a crime, simply write “Please discuss with me” or “Will discuss at the interview” in the space provided. This indicates that you have a conviction and are not trying to hide it, and also that you are willing to discuss it at an appropriate time. During an interview, be honest about your past but do not dwell on your criminal convictions. Instead, focus on the future by taking responsibility for your actions and expressing your desire to move forward with your career and improve your life.
- If you do not hear back after submitting an application and/or a résumé, follow up with a phone call. Two weeks is the generally accepted length of time in which to expect a reply. Following up on an application is an easy way to show a potential employer that you are serious about working for them.

All tips above in regards to dress and demeanor also apply in interview situations. Dress neatly, be professional, and stay positive!

Benefits and Assistance

Introduction

THIS CHAPTER IS INTENDED AS AN OVERVIEW OF SOME of the assistance programs that may be available to people who have been released from prison. It is not a comprehensive overview of all programs that exist. Parole officers and staff people from local social services offices may have more complete information. Also, interested individuals should check with the director of their housing facility or the groups listed in Chapter 3: “Community Organizations” for more information. It never hurts to ask for help!

Getting Started

❑ Call 2-1-1

Calling 2-1-1 is a free and easy way to find information about local services that may be available. People can dial 2-1-1, pick a language, and choose one of the following three options:

- Press “1” to learn about local services, such as food and housing assistance, child care and after-school programs, senior services, tax help, or post-disaster help. Staff members are available to answer questions and provide information 24 hours per day, seven days per week.
- Press “2” to learn about state benefits and programs, such as SNAP (food stamps), Medicaid, Children’s Health Insurance Program (CHIP), and Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF). Staff members are available to answer questions about these programs Monday through Friday from 8:00 a.m. - 8:00 p.m.
- Press “3” to report waste, fraud, and abuse in state health and human services programs. People can also call the Texas Health and Human Services directly at 1-877-541-7905 with regards to this issue.

❑ Visit a Health and Human Services Commission (HHSC) Benefits Office

First, interested individuals can call 2-1-1 to find a nearby HHSC benefits office. Those interested in applying for services must visit their local office. However, staff members can speak with people over the phone or come to their homes if the applicant has certain limitations: if they live far from an office or cannot get a ride, if there is bad weather, or if they are sick or taking care of an ill family member.¹⁹

State and Federal Benefits and Assistance

YOUR TEXAS BENEFITS IS A WEBSITE THAT PROVIDES AN ONLINE SCREENING FORM THAT DETERMINES eligibility for state benefit programs. Visit www.yourtexasbenefits.com to get started.

❑ Social Security

Social Security (SS) is a federally funded program that provides several different services, including retirement and survivors benefits, disability insurance, supplemental security income (SSI), and the Medicare program. Individuals who were eligible for and receiving SS or SSI benefits before incarceration must contact SS with their release documents before benefits can begin again.²⁰ If a person's benefits were terminated during incarceration, he or she must submit a new application to determine eligibility. In some cases, benefits can be reinstated during a window of time toward the end of one's period of incarceration. Note: Parole officers or other unit officials may have more information.

- Social security disability benefits are available to individuals who have had recent employment and paid Social Security taxes but are now unable to work due to a serious medical condition that is expected to last more than a year.²¹
- Social Security retirement benefits are available to individuals over the age of 62 who have worked and paid Social Security taxes for 10 years.²²
- SSI can be paid to individuals over the age of 65 who are blind or disabled, and those whose income is below certain limits.²³

All social security benefits are free of charge, but they are suspended during a period of incarceration and during any month in which a condition of probation or parole is violated.²⁴

For more information, call SS toll-free Monday through Friday, 7:00 a.m. - 7:00 p.m., at 1-800-772-1213. Additional information is available at www.socialsecurity.gov.

❑ SNAP and TANF

The Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP), formerly known as “food stamps,” is provided by the Texas Health and Human Services Commission. Assistance is issued through a Lonestar card, which can be used like a debit card, to individuals or families that meet program requirements. Funds are distributed monthly to the card.

Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) is a program available to individuals who have dependent children living in their household and who are in need of emergency funds. An application is used to determine eligibility, and it can take up to 45 days to receive funds.

Eligible individuals can apply for SNAP and TANF benefits at their local Texas Health and Human Services office. Interested individuals should call 2-1-1 for locations.

Please note: Texas and federal law prohibit individuals with a felony drug conviction after 1996 to receive SNAP or TANF.

A Note about the “Letter”

During incarceration, some people may see a copy of a document that describes all of the assistance and benefits available to them; it is usually titled something like “Benefits for Inmates Upon Release.” While the information contained in the letter is not altogether false, it is misleading. Individuals must apply and be approved for all of the services mentioned in the letter. They are not automatically given money or assistance once released from prison, which is what the letter seems to suggest. The Texas Health and Human Services Commission, which can be reached at 1-877-787-8999, does provide emergency food stamps; however, an application must be completed before eligibility can be determined, and, as stated above, individuals convicted of a drug offense are ineligible.

No general relief fund exists in Texas (as the letter suggests), but TANF does provide funds to certain individuals. Again, individuals convicted of a drug offense are barred from receiving these funds, and eligibility will be determined after an application and supporting documents have been submitted. Benefits determination can take up to 45 days to complete.

❑ Texas Department of Assistance and Rehabilitation Services (DARS)

For more information on workplace development for individuals with disabilities, see page 168.

DARS provides physically or mentally disabled individuals with assistance in gaining the skills needed for certain careers. Specifically, it offers vocational rehabilitation services, including tips on preparing for job interviews and keeping employment. DARS also provides specific services to deaf and hard-of-hearing individuals, such as guidance and counseling, hearing evaluations, communication assistance, and academic and vocational training. Individuals interested in signing up for benefits should call or visit their local DARS Division for Rehabilitation Services office. A list of local offices is available at www.dars.state.tx.us.

When visiting an office, individuals should bring a photo ID, their social security card, proof of their home address, information relating to their medical history (including the name of their primary doctor), and their medical insurance card. DARS services are free of charge as long as a person meets certain basic requirements or if he or she is already receiving Social Security disability benefits.

□ Information for Veterans

People with military service may be entitled to additional assistance programs. Interested individuals should read about the programs available throughout the state (directly below), and then use the resources at the end of this section to reach out to local centers. The organizations and programs provided here are not intended to be a complete listing of every available resource and center throughout the state; they are intended to be a starting point for research.

■ Programs Available to Veterans

The Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) is a federal agency that provides benefits and assistance to veterans and their dependents. It offers comprehensive services, including information about and assistance with applying for veterans benefits and entitlements information, claims processing, representation and advocacy, Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) counseling, Veterans Homes providing nursing care, and employment assistance. To locate the nearest VA benefits office, call 1-800-827-1000. To locate the nearest medical treatment center, call 1-877-222-8387 or visit www2.va.gov/directory.

Additional VA Programs:

- The Department of Veterans Affairs operates medical centers throughout the state that provide physical and mental health care services to veterans, in addition to community-based counseling centers that work with veterans suffering from PTSD. For more information about these services, call 1-800-905-4675. For more information about PTSD, visit www.mentalhealth.va.gov.

- The VA provides a program called Health Care for Homeless Veterans (HCHV) that has a coordinator who is responsible for assisting homeless veterans through community-based care, outreach, clinical assessments, and referrals for medical and mental health care services. HCHV can also help find permanent housing. To locate a local coordinator, call 1-877-222-8387 or visit www1.va.gov/homeless.
- The VA also has Veterans Industries and Compensated Work Therapy (CWT) programs that offer work opportunities and therapeutic housing for homeless veterans with a physical or mental disability, or those with drug addiction problems. Individuals are paid for their work in addition to receiving employment assistance in the community. For more information, contact a CWT coordinator at 1-877-822-8387 or visit www.cwt.va.gov.

The Texas Veterans Commission (TVC) is a state agency that assists veterans and their families with federal and state veterans benefits and services. It can provide assistance with benefits and entitlement information, claims processing, representation, and employment assistance. For more information, call 1-800-252-VETS (8387) or visit www.TVC.state.tx.us.

The Department of Labor is a federal agency that provides several different programs for veterans, including the Disabled Veterans Outreach Program (DVOP) and Local Veterans Employment Representatives (LVER), both of which provide employment development to veterans. Some LVER specialists are located in state employment offices, but to find a local DVOP or LVER, visit www.dol.gov/vets/aboutvets/contacts/main.htm.

Programs Available for Women Veterans

- The Texas Department of Veterans Affairs provides a Woman Veterans Coordinator to address the special needs of female veterans. For more information, call 1-800-562-2308 or visit www.tvc.state.tx.us/womenveterans.htm.
- Mentors with Women in Community Service assist women who are leaving prison and re-entering their communities by encouraging positive behaviors, building self-esteem, and helping them gain job skills. For more information, call 1-800-283-9427 or visit www.wics.org.

Education

Introduction

Continuing to pursue an education after a period of incarceration can seem very difficult, but it is certainly worthwhile – regardless of whether one’s goals are to obtain a GED, enter into a trade or vocational school, or begin undergraduate classes at a local college. The information and resources contained in this chapter are not all-inclusive, but this is a good place to start for people looking to pursue an education after being released from prison. Additionally, interested individuals may want to review the resources listed in Chapter 3: “Community Organizations” and Chapter 6: “Employment,” as they may also provide useful services.

Getting a GED²⁵

“GED” stands for General Education Development. It is considered the equivalent of a high school diploma, and it is accepted by 97% of colleges and universities throughout the United States.²⁶ Any Texas resident who has not graduated from high school is eligible to take the GED test as long as they have an official photo ID, are at least 18 years of age, and are not enrolled in high school.

Those who have already received their GED and want to obtain a copy of their certificate or scores can contact the GED Unit at the Texas Education Agency through its website at www.tea.state.tx.us. Individuals must provide their complete name, date of birth, and social security number.

□ Preparing for the GED Test

- Know what is on the test. The GED test is multiple-choice, and it focuses on five major subject areas: math, science, social studies, reading, and writing.²⁷ In most cases, test sections include various brief reading passages, followed by a few questions that test a person’s comprehension of that passage. An essay section tests writing skills.

- Practice as much as possible before the test. Taking a GED practice test or reviewing old test questions before taking the test can be a tremendous benefit. It also helps test-takers determine their strengths and weaknesses, which helps them focus on certain practice areas when studying for the test.
- Take a GED test preparation class or study program. Some people may wish to enroll in a GED preparation course, especially if it has been awhile since they have been in school. Some classes are free of charge. Interested individuals should check their community resources, including the resources listed at the end of this chapter, for local GED prep courses.

Financial Aid

□ Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA)

Like many federally funded programs, some restrictions are involved when receiving funds for continuing education. The best way for people to find out whether they are eligible to receive federal funding is by filling out an eligibility worksheet. This worksheet is available on the FAFSA website at www.fafsa.ed.gov under the “Before Beginning a FAFSA” tab in the left column. In general, individuals may not be able to receive federal student aid if they have been previously convicted of selling or possessing illegal drugs while receiving such aid (this includes grants, loans, and work study funding).

Please note: Individuals with a drug conviction are not automatically ineligible for federal student aid.²⁸ For more information, call the Federal Student Aid Information Center at 1-800-433-3243.

□ Pell Grants

Federal Pell Grants are direct grants awarded through participating institutions to students with financial need who have not received their first bachelor’s degree or who are enrolled in certain post-baccalaureate programs that lead to teacher certification or licensure. Participating institutions either credit the Federal Pell Grant funds to the student’s school account, pay the student directly (usually by check), or combine these methods. Students must be paid at least once per term – semester, trimester, or quarter.²⁹

The main Pell Grant eligibility requirement is that the student must either be pursuing an undergraduate degree or be enrolled in an eligible post-baccalaureate teaching credential program. Individuals who are currently incarcerated are not eligible to receive Pell Grants. Students who have not already earned a bachelor’s degree are considered to have “undergraduate” status. This includes individuals who have received an associate’s degree.

²⁸ Department of Education, “Student Aid on the Web,” (2009): <http://studentaid.ed.gov/PORTALSWebApp/students/english/aideligibility.jsp?tab=funding>, accessed June 17, 2010.

²⁹ Department of Education, “Federal Pell Grant Program,” (2009): <http://www.ed.gov/programs/fpg/index.html>, accessed June 17, 2010.

Pell Grants are provided to students who have demonstrated financial need. Once a FAFSA has been completed, the Expected Family Contribution (EFC) will be determined. The lower the EFC, the greater the student's financial need and the greater the amount of the Pell Grant. The EFC is computed by the Central Processing System and is based on the information the student reported on the FAFSA. For more information on Pell Grants and other student aid, visit www.ed.gov/programs/fpg/index.html.

Getting Involved

Voting Information³⁰

To be eligible to register to vote in Texas, a person must be:

- a U.S. citizen;
- a resident of the county where he or she registers to vote;
- 18 years old (though a person may register at 17 years and 10 months);
- not convicted of a felony, unless his or her sentence is completed, including any probation or parole; and
- not declared mentally incapacitated by a court of law.

People previously convicted of a felony are not required to complete a special form, make a court appearance, or face a waiting period before registering to vote. Furthermore, they cannot be forced to prove that they have completed their sentence. Instead, they must only complete a voter registration form and swear that they are eligible to vote.

About The Voter Registration Card

Voter registration becomes effective 30 days after the form is submitted and accepted, and voter cards are usually mailed to people within 30 days after that process. As soon as they get their card, people should read the information on the back of the certificate, sign by the X on the front of the card, and keep the card in a safe place until they take it to the polls to vote. New certificates are mailed out every two years to the most recent address a person gives to a voter registrar. If a person moves to a different county in Texas, he or she will need to re-register.

Reaching Out to Public Officials

Senators and Representatives need to hear from their constituents! Members of Congress (at the national level), as well as legislators and officials at the state level need to know what people think about specific issues and legislation – and they especially need to hear from individuals who have had firsthand experience with the criminal justice system. Previously incarcerated people may be able to provide insight and additional information to policy-makers that they would not otherwise have considered.

Those who want to contact elected officials must remember to always be courteous, reasonable, and respectful to them and their staff. Above all, remember that they have been elected to represent ALL of their constituents!

Individuals seeking to learn who represents them should visit www.fyi.legis.state.tx.us and enter their city and zip code.

□ General Tips on Contacting A Representative

The following tips can assist those of you who want to contact a legislator:

- Identify yourself as a constituent, and familiarize yourself with the lawmaker's voting record on your particular issue. They are impressed by this!
- Ask the legislative staff if there is a key staff member who is the point person working on the issue that concerns you. This person may be an excellent resource and should easily understand your concern.
- With each contact, keep the message simple and easy to understand. Be honest, direct, positive, and brief. Even if your legislator or his or her staff person is rude or uncooperative, never lose your cool, argue, or threaten anyone. Always keep the communication positive.
- Tell the story of your personal experience, but stick to key points that are relevant to the issue. Legislators and their staff may better understand and respond to stories about real-life situations that impact everyday people. However, because their time is often limited, keep your story brief.
- Ask for specific action from the legislator or staff person. Feel free to talk about the issue or tell them why you care, but also make a specific request for how you would like the legislator to take action (for instance, support this bill, vote against this bill, etc.). The legislator may not promise or commit to a specific action, but it is important to make a request.
- If your legislator supports your issue through action on legislation, call or write your thanks and offer him or her your continued support.

□ Writing or Emailing A Representative

- Keep letters short and to the point. Make it personal and use your own words.
- When writing about specific legislation, include the bill number.
- Either type the letter or write very legibly, and sign it. Under your signature, type or print your name, and include your address.

- If you are writing to a state legislator, send your correspondence both to his or her state office (at the Capitol Building in Austin) as well as to his or her district office (for instance, in Dallas or El Paso or wherever the legislator is from).
- Be persistent. Do not be put off by a negative response. Follow through. Write again and get others to write if you can.

□ Calling A Representative

- If the public official is not available, you may either leave a message with his or her staff, or request that your call be returned. If you have the opportunity to speak to the staff member who is the point person on your issue of concern, feel free to explain your reason for calling to that person. More than likely, you will be dealing often with him or her in your communications about the issue, as that person is responsible for relaying constituents' information or concerns to the legislator. Always treat that staff person as respectfully as you would treat the legislator him or herself.
- If the legislator (or staff member) asks you a question that you do not know the answer to, do not guess. Tell him or her that you will provide that information later – and do so.
- Listen carefully to the legislator's (or staff member's) views; do not interrupt if you disagree. You may want to take a few notes and consider writing a letter to address substantive areas of disagreement.
- Leave the legislator or staff member with your contact information.
- If you would like to facilitate future contacts with your legislator, you may want to write a thank you note to follow up on the call with the legislator or staff member.

□ Visiting A Representative

- Make an appointment and be on time.
- Again, understand that it is very helpful to meet with a legislator's aide if the legislator is not available for a meeting. It is not a bad sign if you are asked to meet with a staffer! This is a usual occurrence.
- Anticipate your initial visit to be relatively brief. You should include a friendly introduction, a concise explanation of your interest in the issue, and a sincere closure thanking the legislator or staff member for his or her time in meeting with you.
- Be prepared to answer specific questions about your issue of interest, and be willing to provide supporting material if you are asked to do so. Again, if the official or staff member asks you a question that you do not know the answer to, do not guess. Tell him or her you will provide that information later and be sure to follow through.
- Listen carefully to the legislator's or staff member's views; do not interrupt if you disagree. You can accomplish more by listening and showing which areas you agree on, and saving areas of disagreement for further consideration and discussion in future contacts. Feel free to make notes on relevant points that you may want to follow up on.

- Leave the legislator or staff member with a one-page fact sheet expressing your views on your issue(s) of interest, and leave your contact information or business card if available.
- ALWAYS write a thank you note after a visit with a legislator or staff member.

Remember: A positive first contact is important in developing a base from which to contact the legislator again on specific bills.
